

TONY FEHER

Rediscovered by Feher in the eighties at Dinosaur Hill, an East Village children's store, marbles are the grace notes in many a Feher melody. Cascading wall installations and totemic stacks of baby food jars each incubate an arpeggio of single, gem-like marbles. When they appear in the chained bottle works, the ruby cabochons seem science specimens or the glassy eyes of an overtrawled haul of hooked fish.
